pay and Dearness Allowance may consist of many other fringe benefits which differ from undertaking to undertaking partly due to historical reasons and partly due to bilateral negotiations between the Management and Trade Union representatives in respect of unionised employees. Further the employees of the same Company having same scales of pay may have different pay packets depending upon the place of their posting. Thus, it is very difficult to quantify the minimum/maximum pay packets paid to the employees/officers of various public sector undertakings.

(b) While no specific proposal is under the consideration of the Government, the need to reduce the disparity is kept in view at the time of wage/pay revision.
